The two secrets of entertaining are first, that the hostess should, herself, take pleasure in the entertaining of her guests, and, second, that only congenial people should be bidden on one and the same occasion. The hostess who is in a tremor of fear because she anticipates some untoward accident, who is afraid that her dinner will not equal those of Mrs. A. or Mrs. B., is inviting failure. She grows nervous and absent-minded and communicates her mental perturbation to every one present in those subtle ways which are still only dimly understood. Conversation languishes, every one is expecting catastrophe, and there is almost a feeling of relief when a servant, also infected by the mistress' anxiety, finally does smash a plate or spill a cup of coffee. It comes in the nature of a thunderclap that clears the air.

After all, should anything go wrong, it could not possibly be worth being uncomfortable over for half a minute—neither on the part of the hostess nor her friends. The overwhelming mortification felt, out of all proportion to the cause, is often only a species of wounded vanity.

Of course, one wishes to give the guest the best welcome that can be offered—both from a personal standpoint, and in the way of good cheer. But it is a homely old saying, worth taking to heart: "Accidents will happen in even the best regulated family."

tations of the league in the way of comfort, convenience and real homelikeness. While the exhibition was not large, it was excellent throughout. The exhibition room is so wonderfully well adapted to the exhibition that none could be considered badly hung. The home artists are well represented, Mr. D. Howard Hitchcock, Miss Annie Parke, Mrs. Helen Kelley, Mrs. H. M. von Holt, Mr. P. H. Dodge, Miss Alice Spalding, Mrs. Pierre Jones, Jos. I. Whittle, James A. Wilder, Mrs. S. Decoto, Frances S. Malony, Mrs. L. G. Marshall, while two talented visitors, Mr. Otto Wix and Mrs. F. A. McNeill, greatly enriched the collection with their beautiful work. Mrs. Graham was represented by some clever wood carving, and Mr. Julius Rosenstein by an excellent portrait bust of Dr. Moore and other work. The manual training department of the Kamehameha school for boys sent some fine calabashes and other vehicles, which with the wood carving and modeling it is hoped will form a nucleus for an exhibition of arts and crafts later on.

The guests came and went informally during the evening and were received by the president, Mr. D. Howard Hitchcock and Mrs. Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dodge, Mrs. von Holt and Miss Annie Parke.

Captain Otwell, who has been living at Mrs. McDonald's at Punahou, has taken the house of Mrs. Mabel Wing Castle on College Hills, Major Russell, the former tenant, having been unexpectedly ordered to Panama.

One of the most efficient assistants at the fair and luau given at the home of the Princess Kawanakoa was Miss Adele Dreier, who was on duty in the ice cream booth of which Mrs. Murphy was the head. Not only was she clever and prompt in waiting upon her patrons, but her energy and amiability made her service all the more valued by others assigned to the same booth.

An entertainment contemplated by Aloha Chapter, D. A. R., by way of closing the season, has been deferred until the opening meeting in the autumn.

Dr. and Mrs. Walter Hoffmann gave an informal dinner on Wednesday evening to Mr. Otto Wix, the artist, now visiting in Honolulu and whose charming Mexican pictures are so admired in the present exhibition. Mr. Wix, who is a brilliant conversationalist, related many interesting reminiscences of his sojourn in Mexico which delighted his hearers. He will be in the islands some time, making studies for future pictures.

The polo game on the eleventh promises to be one of the principal social events of the month and the smart set will be well represented at Moanala that day. The polo club directors are working up a few new surprises which will be sprung that day. The arrangements for autos will be the same as at the last game, all machines to be put on the field a few yards back of the side lines. It is hinted that several of Honolulu's most popular young lady riders will be seen in some novel stunts, and the game itself, without anything else, will be well worth seeing and will give the public an idea of what they can expect from the next inter-island match between Maui and Oahu, which game is scheduled to come off about the first of August.

Miss Eva Stevens leaves on June 12 for Chicago to spend the summer and to take up some special piano work. She will return early in September and resume teaching.

Artistically, the Mackenzie Gordon recital last night at the Moana Hotel was a great success; from point of attendance, however, it was disappointing, by no means the number of people attending that the merits of the entertainment justified. Mr. Gordon's singing was such as to enhance his already high reputation as an accomplished and finished vocalist, while the local musicians who assisted on the program won well-deserved applause. Following the recital was a dance, given in honor of Mr. Gordon, at which a couple of hundred were present.

The senior class at the Kawaiahae Seminary gave a delightful social last evening to their friends. Young men from both Mills Institute and Kamehameha were among the guests present.

Miss Annie Dowsett of San Francisco, who left Honolulu six years ago, was a passenger on the Mongolia. She is the guest of Mrs. Elizabeth Freeth on Emma street. Miss Dowsett will remain here about six months.

Miss McGoon proved herself to be a very brilliant and efficient hostess on Friday evening. She entertained a large company at a card party, which was followed by a supper and dancing. There were twelve tables for the convenience of the card players. The decorations were purple asters which were very effectively arranged. The guests were the Misses Freeth, Muriel Campbell, Miss Bertelmann, Miss Canton, Miss Gwendolen Jenkins, Miss K. Wilcox, Miss Ada Mutch, Miss Hattie Lucas, Misses Heen, Miss Moir, Miss Adele Morgan, Miss Annabel Low, the Misses Craig, Miss Rosie Herbert, Mr. Heen, Mr. Chas. Stillman, Mr. Chas. Lyman, Mr. Bill Engle, Mr. Albert McDougal, Mr. Carden, Mr. Lucas, Messrs. Jack and William Desha, and Mr. Janoka.

Miss Mary H. Krout received by the last mail from Mrs. Lew Wallace, who is still living at her home in Crawfordsville, Indiana, some pages of a play in General Wallace's clear and beautiful handwriting. Appropriately framed, with an autograph attached, one page will be presented to the Honolulu Library and one to the Library of the Kilauea Art League.

They have left the Snark while it is receiving the finishing touches they were not able to have attended to in San Francisco. Their mornings are entirely occupied with literary work. Mrs. London being her husband's most efficient secretary. They are at leisure, however, in the afternoon. Both the novelist and his wife have made a most favorable impression upon those who have been so fortunate as to have met them.
